

Kristin left the practice of law in 1998 to enter hospital administration with JPS Health Network in Fort Worth, Texas. Service at JPS included leadership of the JPS Physician Group as well as other responsibilities for the health network. After 10 years with JPS, Kristin was selected to be the President of the Dallas-Fort Worth Hospital Council Foundation. Kristin supports the Foundation's trustees, staff and their many collaborators in their quest to enhance services and add value to North Texas' healthcare industry including hospitals, physicians, universities and colleges. Kristin worked with a broad team from UT Southwestern, UT Dallas, local medical societies, Texas A&M, Texas Tech and the Texas Medical Association to prepare and submit Regional Extension Center applications to the Office of National Coordinator for Health Information Technology. She now serves on the North Texas Regional Extension Center's (NTREC) Board. When not at work, Kristin loves to be at home with her husband, two daughters, three horses and seven dogs. She also loves music and her TCU Horned Frogs ("Go Frogs!").
